Change Proposal Type (Select only one option)

Clarifications are non-substantive changes to S-100. A clarification must not cause any substantive semantic change to S-100.

Discrepancy corrections resolve discrepancies between different locations in the text, between text and artifact (e.g., schema), or between different artifacts, for a single version of the standard. A discrepancy correction must not cause any substantive semantic change to S-100.

Revisions are substantive semantic changes to S-100. E.g., correct factual errors, introduce necessary changes resulting from experience or changed circumstances, add new specifications within an existing section. Revisions could have an impact on either existing users or future users of a revised standard.

Extensions introduce significant changes such as new concepts, constructs or data types and are likely to have a significant impact on either existing users or future users.

The final decision on classification of the change proposal will be made when the proposal is discussed by the working group.
